

Public v In-house Consulting Skills Workshops

There are distinct benefits to both in-house and public workshops – which is most appropriate for you? We have tried to summarise some of the arguments for either approach:

In favour of Public Workshops	In favour of In-house Workshops
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Networking with staff from other industries, professions and backgrounds – particularly relevant to organisations/ teams that have been together for a long time, and would benefit from some external stimulus. On a public workshop you will get a broader range of views expressed during discussions. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Internal team Building – The workshop is an exceptional opportunity to build relationships and bond as a team – particularly relevant after a re-organisation, or when there is a significant influx of new staff.
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The opportunity to “drip feed” your staff on to the workshop – particularly relevant if you are unable to release 12 - 15 of your staff for 3 days at the same time. The Public workshop may help the training fit more sociably with Business as Usual. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Greater ability to customise the agenda specifically for your own requirements. – JHW is happy to change sessions, timings, role-plays and exercises to make the event more relevant to the host organisation.
	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The in-house format provides the client with greater control over the cost of facilities (residential v non-residential etc)

JHW is pleased to be able to offer both options in order to better meet the needs of its clients. Please feel free to contact us to discuss your needs further.